

It has been a mixed week for risk assets, with US equities outperforming Europe and Japan. Tensions in the Middle East pushed oil price back above $100/bbl. Treasury markets were under renewed downside pressure with concerns surrounding the inflation outlook. Investors mainly allocated into US, World and EM equity exposures. In Fixed Income, the focus was on EM and Euro government short term debt.

US equities: broadening the base

Anxiety about disruption to the software industry and concerns about exponential plans for capital expenditure from major US tech companies seems to have faded in April. Technology stocks led the recovery since the beginning of the month, with the corporate earnings season gaining pace.

Still, our focus remains on fundamentals, with a tilt towards businesses with a more balanced relationship to risk and reward. In this context we are selective with US equities and favour exposures that go beyond highly valued mega caps. This includes a preference for greater diversification³ via an equal-weight approach, compared to traditional market capitalisation-weighted indices.

Investors' appetite for US equities is unabated

US equities have recovered strongly since the beginning of the month, with close to 9% net total return and outperforming European equities¹. While the US-Iran conflict hit most markets in March, robust corporate earnings have provided fundamental support for the domestic market rally. Energy and Information Technology benefitted from positive earnings revisions in contrast with other US sectors. One reflecting the strong pricing power of energy companies and the latter driven by continued strength in semiconductors and AI-related companies. We are still early stage in the US 1Q26 corporate earnings season and between 27-30 April over 100 S&P 500 companies are scheduled to report including some of the big tech names. So far results are suggesting positive revenue forecast², consensus estimates remain for 17% EPS growth this year. Nevertheless, the pick-up in market volatility in March is a reminder that downside risks remain and the strong concentration in earnings upgrade is another reminder of concentration risk in broad market capitalisation weighted US equities indices. Uncertainty surrounding the inflation outlook and its impact on US consumers – a key driver of US GDP growth – is another risk.

Having said that, the pace of asset gathering for US equity UCITS ETFs has recovered this month with over €3bn in net new assets. The chart on the cover page shows monthly flows into US equities UCITS ETFs per underlying exposures. It suggests some rotation in allocation with a general preference for broad market capitalisation-weighted exposures since early April at the expense of equal-weighted. It suggests a shift of focus from what was observed back in January and February when investors looked for greater diversification³ in the local market. Another barometer of investor sentiment is the CFTC's report on net positions in S&P 500 e-mini futures contracts. Appetite for the broader market has recovered strongly since the beginning of the month with the latest futures positioning back to the highs observed in late 2024.

Reduce concentration with equal-weight approach

More economically sensitive US sectors have shown their level of resilience in 1Q26, and reducing the sector biases of large broad market capitalisation indices could make sense. On this basis, index constructed with an equal weight methodology such as the S&P 500 equal weight index or the Solactive US Tech 100 equal-weight index could be a potential contender for US equity allocation. These exposures allow for a greater tilt towards industries and companies that are more domestically oriented such as energy, industrials or consumer staples. Both exposures have exhibited resilient performance¹ in the first quarter compared to the S&P 500 (see full analysis in the table below).

Overall, we anticipate positive earnings growth for US equities this year. However, the elevated valuations of the largest US companies make them more prone to volatility. In this environment, we believe that investors should broaden their exposure across the market capitalisation spectrum, adopting a more diversified² approach to US equities.

Knowing your risk

It is important for potential investors to evaluate the risks described below and in the fund's Key Investor Document ("KID") and prospectus available on our website www.amundiETF.com.

CAPITAL AT RISK

ETFs are tracking instruments. Their risk profile is similar to a direct investment in the underlying index. Investors' capital is fully at risk and investors may not get back the amount originally invested.

UNDERLYING RISK

The underlying index of an ETF may be complex and volatile. For example, ETFs exposed to Emerging Markets carry a greater risk of potential loss than investment in Developed Markets as they are exposed to a wide range of unpredictable Emerging Market risks.

REPLICATION RISK

The fund's objectives might not be reached due to unexpected events on the underlying markets which will impact the index calculation and the efficient fund replication.

COUNTERPARTY RISK

Investors are exposed to risks resulting from the use of an OTC swap (over-the-counter) or securities lending with the respective counterparty(-ies). Counterparty(-ies) are credit institution(s) whose name(s) can be found on the fund's website amundiETF.com. In line with the UCITS guidelines, the exposure to the counterparty cannot exceed 10% of the total assets of the fund.

CURRENCY RISK

An ETF may be exposed to currency risk if the ETF is denominated in a currency different to that of the underlying index securities it is tracking. This means that exchange rate fluctuations could have a negative or positive effect on returns.

LIQUIDITY RISK

There is a risk associated with the markets to which the ETF is exposed. The price and the value of investments are linked to the liquidity risk of the underlying index securities. Investments can go up or down. In addition, on the secondary market liquidity is provided by registered market makers on the respective stock exchange where the ETF is listed. On exchange, liquidity may be limited as a result of a suspension in the underlying market represented by the underlying index tracked by the ETF; a failure in the systems of one of the relevant stock exchanges, or other market-maker systems; or an abnormal trading situation or event.

VOLATILITY RISK

The ETF is exposed to changes in the volatility patterns of the underlying index relevant markets. The ETF value can change rapidly and unpredictably, and potentially move in a large magnitude, up or down.

CONCENTRATION RISK

ETFs can select a large portion of their assets in a particular issuer, industry, stocks or type of bonds, country or region for their portfolio. Where selection rules are extensive, it can lead to a more concentrated portfolio where risk is spread over fewer stocks. Where selection rules are extensive, it can lead to a more concentrated portfolio where risk is spread over fewer stocks. This can mean both higher volatility and a greater risk of loss.

AUSTRALIA AND NEW ZEALAND

Standard Disclaimer for use in Australia and New Zealand by Amundi in respect of promotional materials and even formal offer documentation

This document and any accompanying documentation ("Documentation") is provided in Australia and New Zealand by Amundi. Amundi is regulated by the French Autorité des Marchés Financiers ("AMF") under French laws, which differ from Australian laws. Pursuant to instruments issued by the Australian Securities and Investments Commission, Amundi is exempt from the requirement to hold an Australian financial services licence under Australia's Corporations Act 2001 (Cth) in respect of their provision of financial services in Australia.

The material in the Documentation is intended only for use in Australia by wholesale clients within the meaning of Part 7.1 of Australia's Corporations Act 2001 (Cth) and in New Zealand by wholesale investors within the meaning of clause 3(2) of Schedule 1 of New Zealand's Financial Markets Conduct Act 2013 (NZ).

The material in the Documentation is not intended to amount to investment, legal, tax or other advice or a recommendation to invest. To the extent that any of the material in the Documentation is financial product advice, it is general advice only and does not take into account the objectives, financial situation or needs of any person. Before acting on any of the material, a person should therefore conduct their own assessment of this material with regard to their own situation, and obtain such advice as they consider necessary or appropriate. Whilst every effort is made to ensure the information in this document is accurate, its accuracy, reliability and completeness are not guaranteed.

This material may include forward-looking statements, which are not guarantees or predictions of future performance. Any forward-looking statements contained in this material involve known and unknown risks, uncertainties and assumptions and other important factors which may cause actual results to differ from those contained in this material. Forward-looking statements, by their very nature, are subject to uncertainty and contingencies many of which are outside the control of Amundi or the Amundi Group.

Past performance is not a reliable indication of future performance. Amundi nor any member of entity, guarantees the performance of any product, the repayment of capital, or any specific rate of return.

The Documentation is only available to persons receiving the Documentation in Australia and New Zealand. If a person has accessed the Documentation outside of Australia and New Zealand, they should inform themselves of any securities selling restrictions that may apply in their home country. Nothing in the Documentation constitutes an offer of securities or financial products unless the document is an offer document provided to you expressly for such purpose.

The Documentation is not a disclosure document or a product disclosure document for the purposes of the Corporations Act 2001 (Cth) or the Financial Markets Conduct Act 2013 (NZ). The Documentation has not been and will not be lodged with the Australian Securities and Investments Commission (ASIC) or the Registrar of Financial Service Providers and does not contain all the information that a prospectus or a product disclosure statement is required to contain.
